Oppose*Explanation:

According to Michigan Audubon, the sandhill crane was hunted nearly to extinction in Michigan a century ago. Its recovery as a species is characterized as a conservation success story. <https://www.michiganaudubon.org/news-events/signature-events/cranefest/about-sandhill-cranes/>

SR 0030, which encourages the creation of a sandhill crane hunting season, cites the Michigan Breeding Waterfowl Survey data showing 48,900 sandhill cranes in 2016. However, the same survey shows a total of 115,000 sandhill cranes in 2015. This is either reflective of a precipitous drop in population or the difficulty in accurately determining the size of the sandhill crane population.
