

Eleven YEARS OF SERVICE

When Cynthia Martinovich Lardner joined what was then called the Bar Journal Advisory Board in the spring of 1992, she became one of only eight members who are still serving on what is now called the Publications and Website Advisory Committee. Since then, she has given birth to three of her four children and nine theme issues of the Bar Journal, on subjects ranging from commercial law, the UCC, contract law, consumer law, and district court practice—all areas in which her practice background equipped her to serve as a knowledgeable editor—to children and the law, psychology and the law, and, with this, her last theme issue, alternative careers for lawyers. The themes she has edited recently reflect her evolution from in-house counsel for a large banking corporation, to private (home office) practitioner and busy mother, to one who has chosen to emerge from her attorney chrysalis, leaving behind the practice of law altogether, but not the transferable advocacy and counseling skills she acquired as a lawyer and now will put to use in her new profession as a psychologist specializing in working with the gifted. We will miss Cindy's contributions to the committee's work, for which we thank her, but we wish her joy, satisfaction, success, and beautiful "wings" in her new chosen profession. ♦
